THE SOUTH AMERICAN TRANSNATIONAL TEAMS CHAMPIONSHIP

THE SOUTH AMERICAN TRANSNATIONAL TEAMS – DAY 2

The talk of the tournament to date was the team of Spanish women who won their first four matches and lost the fifth only narrowly; they were leading the field.

The Scribbler bumped into the two bookmakers who'd been touting Caracci and Ventin yesterday. They were looking to lay off part of a large wager placed on the Spanish women by someone with the initials JC (not the Scribbler, I hasten to add, albeit regretfully). The women had been installed at such long odds that all they had to do was make the semifinals and the bet holder could lay off the initial bet and still win a bundle. The bookies were nervous. The Innocent Bystander, having made a bet on d'Orsi, was calm – they were only 6 VP out of fourth place and a semifinal spot.

It was time for the Scribbler to put in an appearance at Mesa 1, where the women would do battle with the Rio de la Plata team for Match 6. The players in the Open Room: Nuria Almirall (North)-Marta Almirall (South) versus Gerardo Siano (East) and Diego Tuma (West). In the Closed Room, the Scribbler's better half would watch Arturo Grieben-Roberto Maffei (NS) face off against Mari Carmen Babot-Carmen Cafranga (EW)

One of the worst things that can happen to a partnership in bridge is to double a partscore and have it make. Apart from the IMPs lost, the board can have a debilitating effect on the pair. Conversely, it builds the confidence of the pair doubled.

Diego Tuma and Gerardo Siano

(Warning: some of the following auctions may seem a little odd to players of natural systems. It is because Siano-Tuma play:

1♣=any 15-21

1♦/1♥/1♠=11-14 unbalanced

1NT=11-14 balanced

2♣=any 22+ unbalanced; 24+ balanced

2♦=one major weak; weak with two majors, 22-23 balanced

2♥/2♠=the major bid plus a minor, weak

2NT-19-21 balanced.)

As I warned you, West's pass looks a little odd to virgin eyes and Tuma missed out on getting his side to a decent diamond partscore. Tuma led the diamond king, ducked, and used partner's heart entries for more diamond plays. Declarer made two hearts, one diamond and four clubs after discarding a heart from dummy at trick one, plus 90.

After Babot showed the minors, Cafranga competed with three diamonds, which Grieben doubled for penalties, a bid that might have worked, but was very hungry – perhaps he missed his breakfast.; it was only 10:30 a.m.

North led the heart four – declarer won and played a club. North won and continued hearts. This time declarer won and played a diamond to the king and came off dummy with a club; South put in the jack and shifted to...a spade (oops), won by declarer's queen. Declarer was able to ruff one club loser and pick up trumps for one loser, making three, plus 470 and an 11-IMP gain.

Having knocked Grieben-Maffei off balance on the first board, Cafranga dealt them a fierce body blow on the next:

On a heart lead, Siano was able to discard two diamonds from the dummy on the hearts, then played safely by drawing the trumps. The defence tapped the dummy after the second trump, so Siano lost two club tricks for plus 140. He was not happy to see the club queen onside.

North also led a heart, but against game after Cafranga had dredged up a skinny three-diamond trial bid, after which Babot would have needed a gun to her head to refuse to bid game.

Declarer won the heart ace at trick one – what was she to do? It was a bit annoying that, despite East's super-maximum, the hands did not fit that well. Nevertheless, if the club queen were onside second or third, dummy's diamond loser could be discarded on a good club, provided the defence did not get at diamonds first. On the other hand, an early club ruff could scuttle that plan, so declarer led a trump, which ran to the king.

North could see that dummy's hearts might provide discards, so shifted to a club to the ace and another to the ten. When that passed off safely, declarer had only to play another trump; when they split 2-2, she had no more problems. Plus 620, a great result, and one which will not convince Cafranga to bid more conservatively in the future. Another 10 IMPs to España.

Whatever the intricacies of their system, it does seem that West might have chanced one heart at some point in the auction, given that he had two opportunities to do so and did not really want to hear partner bid spades. He might even have been given a third opportunity had North chosen to pass one diamond doubled, and had East then decided to redouble for rescue. It is possible to hold one diamond to three tricks for plus 1100 and East-West will make somewhere between six and eight tricks in hearts, depending on how accurate the play and defence.

Against three no trump, East led the two of hearts to the jack and ace, and she won the second heart, not wanting to make any discard from the dummy. A diamond to the jack held and the club jack was covered by the queen. A spade to the jack held and the ten fell on the next round. Suddenly there were nine tricks for a great plus 600.

North might have bid one no trump over South's one spade, but pass is certainly a reasonable alternative. After all, he did not really expect to have a game. When North-South made plus 110, there were some raised eyebrows in the comparison to find that they'd lost another 10 IMPs.

We had played just three boards and Amirall led 31-0!

Naturally, as Rio de la Plata needed some swings, the boards ran flat and only 8 IMPs were scored in the last seven deals, Amirall running out winners 32-7.

After about seven boards, Gerardo Siano turned to me and said, "They are killing us." He was psychic. It had been relatively flat at our table.

On the last board of the match, an interesting defensive problem almost arose...

It is always a bit of a problem with what to lead from a hand such as North's. Let's say, rightly or wrongly, you decide to lead a low heart. The ten wins in the dummy, four from partner, two from declarer (yes, yes, I know you'd have led a club).

Declarer leads the diamond four, two, ace, six. The two of spades goes to the four, jack and king. Partner continues the heart six and declarer wins his ace as you follow with the eight. Declarer now tries the diamond five to the ten, jack and queen and partner shifts to spades, ten, ace, seven, five. Declarer plays the three of clubs, you play the ten and he ducks in dummy, partner following with the seven.

What do you do now and why? This isn't too tough, you have only hearts and clubs left! Here are the remaining cards.

♣ Q

Let's work out declarer's distribution. You know he has four hearts, so he can't have five spades or he'd have bid the majors at some point. If he has the diamond nine or four cards in the suit, he'd have nine tricks, so he must have three diamonds and two clubs. His high cards are the ace-queen of spades (partner won the king and later returned the ten, remember), the ace-king of hearts and the ace of diamonds. That's already 17, so he cannot have the queen of clubs (and partner has already followed with the seven).

So, declarer is marked with 4=4=3=2 distribution and partner has the nine of diamonds doubleton, the club queen and three spades to the nine remaining.

Did you find the fancy king of clubs continuation or did you lead a mundane heart? If you led the club king, declarer wins the ace as partner follows with the queen, then leads a heart. What would you have partner discard? If a diamond, declarer makes two diamond tricks, if a spade, declarer wins the heart king and plays queen and other spade. Oops. The full deal:

If you played the club king in the middle game, your partners will surely ask, "How did they make that?" in a tone of incredulity.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP

It looked like Brazil was going to win the Round Robin and so it proved. They were granted a bye to the final, to play the winner of the semifinal match between Argentina A and Venezuela A. The final standings were:

Venezuela A	129

This was the most exciting hand of the match between Brazil and Argentina A, fighting for the top spot in qualifying for the South American Junior Championship.

Exciting, yes, interesting, not so much. Both teams played in three no trump, essentially an opportunity lost as six diamonds was virtually cold, as was six no trump on the actual lie of the cards.

The West hand presents a real problem after South opens three hearts in second seat. Typically, a second-seat pre-empt is pretty sound, since one opponent has already passed. Here, it is difficult to resist the lure of an eight-card suit. What would you bid as West after this start?

The possibilities are three no trump, double and pass. If partner had not been a passed hand, perhaps pass would be best, hoping for the reopening double. However, with partner being a passed hand, the chances of him reopening with doubles are decreased.

Three no trump will likely end the auction. Who knows what double may lead to?

Not too many pairs successfully negotiated the pitfalls to bid six diamonds. In our featured junior match, both pairs bid to three no trump, fully understandable whatever the auction.
